AN INTERESTING DECISION.

A woman who signs her busband's name to checks is not a forger, according to a recent ruling by a Denver urt. It appeared that the woman in nestion was sning her husband for vorce and cashed checks by signing er hitsband's name because her chilfren were in want and her husband had failed to provide for them. The ct was proper.

Commenting on the case Law Note says: "The essential element of forgery, an act of injure or defraud, was absent from the wife's act. Her husand could neither be injured or de not be plain scalling is shown by the Has it not been the traditional right of the wife to go through her husband's packets?
